They adjourned. I took a horse and buggy out with Mr. Hawthorn, drove to Shalltown, for the purpose of searching Blake's trunk. I there mingled with his women, and got at the trunk. I searched it, but could find no counterfeit money, but I found different things there, which he explained had been taken, but as that was not my business, I left the trunk, bringing all his papers away with me, at Penton. I heard he had papers which showed him to have been in everything that was bad. I found amongst them a Commission from J. Davis, signed by Judah P. Benjamin, allowing him to pass through their lines and at the same time he held passes from most of the Union generals of the army of the Potomac. This was acting as detective, passport from SHELLTOWN, photographic evidence. I went to Hawthorn.
